

Table of contents

Table of contents	i
List of figures	v
List of tables	vii
Abbreviations and acronyms	ix
1 Introduction	13
1.1 Research themes and the development debate	14
1.2 Research questions	17
1.3 Book outline	19
2 Theoretical framework and findings of previous relevant research	21
2.1 State, education and development	23
2.2 Definitions and forms of decentralisation	27
2.3 Findings from previous research on decentralisation	34
2.3.1 Quality rationale and economic argument	35
2.3.2 Political rationale and participation argument	36
2.4 Decentralisation and school based management: regional experiences	42
2.4.1 Asia	44
2.4.2 Africa	48
2.4.3 Latin America	51
2.5 Concluding remarks	53
3 Cambodia: history and human development profile	55
3.1 Development and education in an historical perspective	55
3.1.1 Origins and French protectorate: until 1953	56
3.1.2 The “Golden Age”: Kingdom of Cambodia 1953-1970	58
3.1.3 Khmer Republic: 1970-1975	60
3.1.4 Democratic Kampuchea: 1975-1979	60
3.1.5 The People’s Republic of Kampuchea: 1979-1989	64
3.1.6 Transition towards peace and democracy: 1989 – present	66
3.2 Human development profile of Cambodia	68
3.2.1 Human development and economic growth	70
3.2.2 Human development and health	71

3.2.3	Human development and education	73
4	Decentralisation reforms in Cambodia and characteristics of Khmer communities	77
4.1	Decentralisation and the election of Commune Councils	78
4.2	Decentralisation in the education sector	83
4.2.1	Cluster Schools: key aspects	84
4.2.2	Priority Action Program for basic education	90
4.3	Cambodian communities: main concepts	94
4.3.1	Kinship and patronage	95
4.3.2	The question of trust	97
4.3.3	Buddhism and communities	98
5	Research methodology	105
5.1	Personal context of the research	105
5.2	Research methodology and the dual role researcher – advisor	107
5.3	Research activities and their limitations	112
5.3.1	Literature and documents	112
5.3.2	Interviews	114
5.3.3	Surveys	115
5.3.4	Participants’ observation, and personal communications	116
5.4	Concluding remarks	116
6	Community participation in schools: findings from Kampong Thom province	119
6.1	Human development profile of Kampong Thom province	120
6.2	Bonding social capital: characteristics of School Associations	126
6.3	Bridging social capital: the link between traditional associations	136
6.3.1	Case study: Botum pagoda as a space for community action	136
6.3.2	Strong or weak bridges?	140
6.4	Institutional social capital: links between communities, schools and public institutions	145
6.4.1	Characteristics of associations’ support to schools	145
6.4.2	Decision making and trust	152
6.4.3	Commune Councils	153
6.5	Concluding remarks	157
7	Conclusions	159
7.1	Summary of findings	160
7.1.1	Decentralisation of education	160
7.1.2	The meaning of ‘community’	162
7.1.3	Community participation in schools	163
7.2	Situating the Cambodian experience and policy suggestions	165
7.2.1	Suggestions for the national level	167
7.2.2	Suggestions for the local level	168
7.3	Directions for further research and concluding remarks	169

References	171
Data sources	192
Annex 1 - List of interviews, observations and personal communications	197
Annex 2 - Leading questions for interviews	201
Annex 3 - School Association Checklist	203
Annex 4 - Map and list of School Association checklists	211
Annex 5 - Statute of Botum Pagoda Association, 1952	215
Annex 6 - List of traditional associations in Kampong Thom	219
Annex 7 - Social Map of Don Lao pagoda (Stoung district)	221